

Community plan for its hospital service

An outpouring of community support, which saw over 1500 letters faxed to the Lakeland Regional Health Authority Board, the Minister of Health and Premier Ralph Klein in the wake of a February 2 meeting, continued Tuesday night as close to 500 Elk Point and district residents jammed the Elks Hall to further make their concerns known to Lakeland Board Chairman Dareld Cholak, CEO Don Carley and Area Manager Barbara Gregoire.

In his opening remarks, Cholak said the draft paper entitled 'Health Delivery in the Lakeland Health Region' "has caused a lot of concern and gotten a lot of feedback," but he emphasized that "it is just a discussion paper. The Board has not made any decisions yet," but would do so by the end of the month.

The first of nine briefs was presented by the Elk Point Hospital Board by spokesman Marvin Bjornstad. It spoke of the hospital's find credentials, as evidenced by three consecutive three year accreditation awards, and of their determination to remain as an acute care facility with 24-hour emergency service. Bjornstad noted that the emergency department is staffed from the existing acute care staff, and that many of the services required for the adjacent long term care wing are shared with the acute care facility. The Elk Point Board has already provided the Regional Board with a plan by which they could continue to operate while making substantial spending cuts, and feel they could make additional cuts if required. The Board is "totally opposed to this draft plan. We feel it is devastating to our institution, our patients and our community."

Bjornstad also read a letter from Fred Lambright of Elk Point Ambulance, who wrote

"as a caregiver and a concerned citizen" to protest that discontinuation of 24-hour emergency care would put "6000 people potentially at risk" and "not only add burdens, but frustration" for the community's physicians. Lambright serves 3700 square miles of territory, and said it already takes 1 to 1 1/2 hours to bring a patient from some of the areas to Elk Point, far beyond the recommended 30 minutes to access acute care, and that it is another half hour to St. Paul or Bonnyville, should a part-time emergency department suggested for community health care centres be closed. Lambright sees the reality of the situation as being "imperative that we retain viable 24-hour emergency and acute care, reduce but don't leave our residents at risk."

"Don't leave our residents at risk"

- Fred Lambright

Margaret Modin spoke on behalf of the seniors in the community, and followed an observation that illness does not confine itself to 8 to 12 hour days by noting that to put most of the recently renovated facility in mothballs "is not good stewardship of the taxpayers' money." She outlined the special needs of seniors for available medical care, which sometimes includes weekly monitoring of conditions. "Travel is a problem for these people, who would then become dependent on others. Their income leaves little for trips to the doctor which would be needed to maintain the quality of life in an aging population."

Chief Thomas Abraham of Frog Lake First Nation said that health care is a treaty right for the native population. Frog Lake uses the facilities of the Elk Point Hospital, as do residents of Long Lake, Onion Lake and Saddle Lake First Nations and Fishing Lake Metis Settlement, and for this use, the Province of Alberta is reimbursed by the federal government. Abraham said he is prepared to undertake a petition to the federal government to fund 10 acute care beds at the hospital, if it becomes necessary to do so, so the First Nation people will have facilities available to them.

Mayor Ed Buck spoke on behalf of the Town of Elk Point, and said that while the community supports the goals of the Region and appreciates the need for reduced spending, the 24-hour-per-day industries in the area, including heavy oil, salt and agriculture, require the provision of 24-hour emergency service. "Our hospital also serves other communities, and undue risk would be placed on these citizens" by downgrading to a health care centre. He noted that the hospital board had already identified substantial cuts that could be made under which the hospital could function well, although on a smaller scale, with savings of 15 to 20% possible.

Walter Anderson spoke on behalf of the people of Fishing Lake, and said the hospital is very important to his community, of which most residents were born in Elk Point. "I never saw the draft, I have no figures to go by, but on behalf of the Fishing Lake Seniors Society, I fully support what is being done here to keep the hospital in place."

Ray Danyluk delivered two briefs, on behalf of both the St. Paul Education Regional Division #1 and on behalf of the County of St. Paul. The School Board is gravely concerned with the closure, both because of the 802 students in

WHEN THE FROST IS ON THE ROSES - Florist Millie Orr was horrified to find the cooler of roses she had spent all Thursday de-thorning for the Valentine's Day rush had gotten much too cool, when she arrived at work Friday.

Frozen roses to warm the heart

By Bruce Campbell

Staff writer

Love is a rose but you better not freeze it.

Millie Orr of Millie's Flowers in Elk Point had a major thorn in her side when she discovered approximately 1,000 of her roses frozen in her refrigerated cabinet Friday morning.

"I've had better days," Millie said. "I got in here and all my Valentine roses were frozen solid — they looked great but now they're all wilted."

It couldn't have happened at a worse time.

"Valentine's Day and Mothers' Day are my biggest days of the year," Orr said.

She suspects the freeze up may have been due to a brief power shortage in the Elk Point area Thursday night.

When the power came back on the refrigerator "might have started working overtime — we don't know for sure what happened."

She's not going to let a few frozen flowers stop her from helping the more romantic-types in Elk Point warm a few hearts for Valentine's Day.

Orr went to the Lloydminster Airport Sunday to pick-up some Valentine roses for today.

Water act meeting Wednesday

The proposed new Water Conservation and Management Act is causing a lot of concern among rural communities and livestock producers, and has prompted the Elk Point Surface Rights Association to hold an information meeting this week. The meeting is slated for Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Seniors Recreation Centre.

EPSRA President Alban Bugej says "we have a slate of very informed speakers and hope some of our questions and concerns will be addressed" at the meeting.

Community pleads for its hospital service their jurisdiction and the students attending schools in Frog Lake and Fishing Lake, and also because of the students who come into the area for extracurricular activities and sporting events. "Accidents frequently occur, and with the loss of emergency service, there is a perceived problem that the delay in accessing care could result in a death. Is there not sufficient use of emergency and acute care to warrant its retention?" Danyluk noted that "there is a point where potential savings do not make sense, especially when life and health are at stake."

Danyluk then read a letter from the County, which stated that they are aware of the need for financial cuts, but want to see "emergency and a reasonable level of acute care retained." Residents of Lindbergh and Heinsburg are up to 45 miles from St. Paul, and these include a large number of farmers, with inherent accident risks, plus the oil and salt industries have large numbers of employees. Seniors and those who access the "prime all season recreational area" also utilize the emergency services.

The oil and salt industries were represented by Ron

Johnson, who said the main concern of industry was the the distance to acute health care for the approximate 400 workers plus a large number of field personnel who may not live in the area, and are therefore not in the area resident count. The industries are highly mechanized, and have a high concentration of heavy trucks, as well as products at high pressure and high temperature and a number of hazardous practices. Industry "puts a lot of dollars into safety training," but still requires access to emergency facilities. Johnson also was concerned about the ability to keep and attract doctors, if the hospital is downgraded, and said if the change takes place "the health care needs of industry and the community won't be met."

Dave Yake added the concerns of the business community and the Chamber of Commerce, noting that the loss of hospital service could potentially mean the death of the community itself, as seniors and families with small children would be uneasy living so far from emergency care, and tourists and sporting teams would be reluctant to visit.

MLA Paul Langevin commended those who presented briefs. "That you are prepared to sacrifice and cooperate came out plainly." Langevin asked the Board to seriously consider the points presented because "it's a clear need, not just a want." He noted that Elk Point is "geographically in a unique situation as the hospital the furthest away from the region's boundary, and serves residents of adjoining regions as well, who retire here, shop and socialize here, and obtain their health care here." He told the residents he "will do all I can to help you to get the health care you need so we are all treated equally."

After the meeting, Langevin told television reporters that "very often when a committee makes a draft paper, they adopt most of it, but in this case, it's a bad draft. I think it should go back to the drawing board and be looked at objectively."

CEO Don Carly addressed the group on behalf of the Regional Health Authority, and said that "clearly, the document has created public discussion. It is a draft document for discussion only, and has generated the interest we wanted it to generate." The draft was put together and presented as a conceptual framework, based on significant bed and financial targets, he noted. "We have to eliminate 94 beds to achieve the bed target by the end of the 1996-97 fiscal year. With the long term care beds it's a more serious situation." Financially, the Regional Board hopes to cut $9 million this year in order to improve and increase community based services as well as meet the requirement of a $7 million reduction. "The purpose of this meeting was to receive feedback. We are thankful to get it. There may be factors we haven't taken into consideration. During the question period at the close of the meeting, Carly said "we are not talking about closing the hospital, just changing its role to help meet our targets." He said that the range of services to be offered at a community health centre can vary widely, as determined by needs in the community it serves.

Dareld Cholak thanked Chief Abraham for his presentation, saying that he was the first First Nations representative to do so. "We would like to meet with them, and we would like to have more input from them." He said that Fishing Lake was the second Metis Settlement to give input.

A variety of questions and comments followed the presentations, with one resident noting that "the first target should be [protecting] the life of the Canadian citizen."

In closing, Marvin Bjornstad, who chaired the meeting, said the community "has spoken loud and clear, and insists the Regional Board go back and take a look at having all areas share in the cuts. It shouldn't all happen in Elk Point."

Strong families share values

Everyone has values. Strong, healthy families generally share important values. The belief that life has meaning and purpose helps members of strong families maintain their positive, confident outlook on life.

Families develop and maintain values in several ways. First of all, adults often bring to their new families the values of the families they grew up in - values such as honesty, helpfulness to others, and pride in hard work. When a couple marries, they gradually establish their own values as a family, choosing from and blending beliefs from their own parents and communities.

Sometimes conflict arises when husband and wife have different values concerning, for example, spending and saving money, attendance at church, or how to spend leisure time. And yet, most families over time come to share a set of beliefs about themselves as individuals and about their values as a family and their place in the world outside the family.

In addition to the importance of the families adult members grew up in, many families are influenced by groups outside the family. Clubs such as Scouts and 4-H have clear statements of values that influence young people as they are growing up. Many families rely on the church and school to help teach values and develop beliefs.

Guidelines for Living: Research on what makes strong families suggests that values and beliefs are important; but it is not true that all strong families have the same beliefs. Different families have different ideas of what guidelines for living are right for them. What is helpful to families is that members share the sense that life is important and meaningful and that each member has a valuable part, both in the family and the world outside the family.

Commitment to a cause beyond immediate day-to-day concerns helps families grow together and look forward to the future. For example, family members could participate in a marathon walk for a cause such as world hunger or medical research to aid victims of certain diseases. A family that values the out-of-doors and wants to protect the physical environment might decide to spend some time after a family picnic or outing to pick up litter in a park or beach area. Or children might be included in visits to or preparation of food for a sick relative or neighbor.

It can be hard to talk about the spiritual dimension because families are very diverse. Strong families describe this dimension in various ways: faith in God, faith in humanity, ethical behavior, or concern for others. Families use their own words to describe an unseen power that can change lives and can provide hope and purpose.

An awareness of the value of life and the value of each individual helps family members to be more patient, more forgiving, and more willing to work together to solve problems. In these days of rapid change, a family's sense of shared values and beliefs can be the one constant in a sea of change.

Next week we'll take a look at how our actions reflect our values and how children learn what they live.

TIDBITS

Have you someone to send a Valentine to this year? If not, keep looking but heed the advice of Leo Buscaglia in his book Loving Each Other. He says, "Always start a relationship by asking: Do I have ulterior motives for wanting to relate to this person? Is my caring conditional? Am I trying to escape something? Am I planning to change the person? Do I need this person to help me make up for a deficiency in myself? If your answer to any of these questions is "Yes," leave the person alone. He or she is better off without you."

A Valentine's bouquet to the community

A Valentine's Day bouquet to the people of Elk Point, who have done nothing short of a tremendous job of lobbying to keep their hospital in service.

The tremendous turnout at two public meetings just five days apart, plus the deluge of letters and faxes which were sent to the Lakeland Regional Health Authority Board, the Minister of Health and the Premier, indicates that Elk Point and district is not considering the potential a done deal, and are willing to put up a fight to keep what they feel is a totally essential service.

No one is listening to those who say the matter has already been decided, and who grumble that it really doesn't matter who says what, the hospital is a goner.

And rightly so. Alberta is still, as far as we know, a democracy, and one in which the needs of the people - especially large and vocal groups of people - are considered.

It doesn't hurt a bit, either, that a lot of tax money comes from the oil patch in this area - tax money which could dwindle if the oil companies decided it was no longer safe to work here if there were no emergency medical services available. Nor does it hurt to have the support of the First Nations, from which, via the federal government, a large amount of money flows into Alberta's health care coffers.

Last Tuesday's meeting emphasized that these two sectors, as well as eight others, were more than willing to speak up for what they believe is right, and to do so in a positive and well-thought-out manner. There was no name-calling, no blame-putting, just an honest plea for the health care the community needs to keep it viable.

Good work, everyone.

RRSP Tax tips - for seniors and others

By Lang Ellison, B.Comm.,
BSC (Agric), P.Ag.

Manager, Toronto Dominion Bank

Pensioners will lose a valuable tax break after 1994 - advisors call it the "$6000 spousal roll."

Up to $6000 of periodic retirement income received in 1994 from an employer's registered pension plan can be rolled into your spouse's RRSP. That's on top of any contribution based on your own earned RRSP limit.

A $6000 spousal roll generates a $6000 tax deduction - for each pensioner who does one. Consider John and Mary, two retirees who each receive a pension. John can make a tax deductible $6000 payment to Mary's RRSP, and she can do the same for his. Planners call that a "criss-cross." You can do the spousal roll even if you're past age 71 and can no longer have your own RRSP. All that matters is that your spouse is younger than 72; but the criss-cross can only be used if both spouses are less than 72 years of age at the end of 1994.

But you must receive income from an employer's plan - either a registered pension plan or a deferred profit sharing plan. Old age security, Canada/Quebec Pension Plan benefits and income from RRSP/RRIFs are not eligible for the spousal retirement income transfer.

The rollover need not be direct; you can receive the income and take up to 60 days past December 31 to write a cheque to your spouse's plan. The deadline for 1994 tax year is March 1, 1995. There is no carry forward as with a normal RRSP contribution. The pension rollover income can only be made to a RRSP in the name of your spouse.

NOTE - If the spouse of a recipient of pension income in 1994 became 71 years of age in 1994 and the rollover of the pension income was not made before December 31, 1994, the rollover cannot be made during the period to March 1, 1995.

Remember - this is the last year... so if you qualify, take advantage of this tax saving opportunity.

RRSP TAX TIPS

Contributing to an RSP might seem confusing with the flurry of activity and information coming at you at this time of year. Here are a few tips to focus on when considering your RSP investment strategy.

Monthly contributions to a RRSP will earn you more!

Set up a pre-authorized payment plan to contribute to your RSP on a regular basis rather than waiting until the last minute to make a once-a-year lump-sum contribution. By making pre-authorized monthly contributions to a RSP, you can earn more for your retirement as your investment starts earning tax-sheltered interest right away, and keeps compounding, month after month. Contributing monthly is also an easier way to reach your annual RRSP contribution limit without borrowing.

Why wait for your tax refund when you can have it now?

If you make automatic, regular contributions to your RSP, you can ask Revenue Canada to reduce the amount of income tax deducted from your paycheque. This way you can have more money in your hands right away. Simply see your financial institution for assistance.

Even more tax-sheltered income!

If you have made your maximum RRSP contribution every year since the 1991 tax year, and still have extra cash for investing, you should know that Revenue Canada allows a lifetime RRSP over-contribution of up to $8000 with no penalty. Although it's not tax deductible, all interest earned will be tax-sheltered while it remains in the plan. And if need be, you can convert the over-contribution into a tax-deductible contribution in a later year.

Take an extra tax deduction of up to $6000!

If you're receiving pension income from a Registered Pension Plan, or Deferred Profit Sharing Plan, don't wait - this is the last year you can take advantage of the pension income transfer of up to $6000 to your spouse's RRSP. However, keep in mind that Canada Pension Plan, Quebec Pension Plan and Old Age Security don't qualify for this spousal income transfer.

Recover "lost" tax deductions!

If you haven't contributed the allowable maximum amounts to your RRSP, don't worry. You can use any missed RRSP contributions for the years after 1990, for up to 7 years. The "notice of assessment" you received from Revenue Canada upon filing your tax return shows your current year's contribution limit plus any amount "carried forward." If you have extra cash, you can make up the missed contributions in addition to your regular limits without penalty. As well as the additional immediate tax savings, you'll also enjoy a more comfortable retirement.

For more information, call TD's RRSP Hotline at 1-800-668-RRSP (7777) or Green Infoline at 1-800-387-2092.

Letter to the Editor

Don't give up yet!

Dear Editor:

In the next two weeks, at some point the Regional Health Authority Board members will be sitting down at a meeting and deciding the future of Elk Point Hospital.

It may seem like they were not listening at the last public meeting and it is easy to conclude that the decision has been made.

I disagree. I feel this is a crucial time. If people are still phoning and faxing their concerns about the hospital closure while the Board is deciding, it will be harder for them to dismiss the feelings and concerns of this area. If we all develop a wait-and-see attitude and don't keep calling and faxing, it will be easy for the Regional Board members to conclude that feelings were vented and everything has calmed down.

Since only two members of the Regional Board were present at the public meeting, the other members haven't personally heard your concerns. Keep calling and faxing for the next two weeks. Show them your care. This is a crucial time. You do make a difference!

Yours truly,
Heather Bjornstad

Regional board introduces proposed electoral boundaries

By Rob Desjardins
Staff Writer

Members of the St. Paul Education Regional Division are going on the road this week to ask for public reactions to a set of proposed electoral boundaries.

Trustees unveiled the proposal at a public meeting in Elk Point on Wednesday, the first of five meetings to be held around the region.

The map divides the division's electoral area, which comprises the Counties of St. Paul and Two Hills, into six subdivisions:

Elk Point/Heinsburg; Myrnam/Derwent/Brousseau/Duverney; Two Hills/Willingdon; St. Paul South; St. Paul North; and Ashmont/Mallaig/St. Vincent.

Each of the subdivisions would elect one trustee. The seventh region, Glen Avon, will be elected by supporters of that school living within four miles of the school in downtown St. Paul.

Speaking to about 25 participants at the Elk Point meeting, trustee Ed Buck said the boundaries were the best compromise the school's boundaries committee could reach.

"We used provincial electoral boundaries as a guide, and got census figures so we knew what the populations of the different areas were," he said.

Buck listed six "guiding principles" which the committee considered in forming the new boundaries. Among these was the task of crossing former jurisdiction areas, while still "respecting communities of common interest."

"We felt it was important to mix people from different jurisdictions, so that people from all areas get better representation," he said.

"We want our members focussed on school issues in a way that serves the entire region."

In keeping with this, he said, the committee tried to mix rural voters with town-dwellers, and worked to make the subdivisions as equal as possible in terms of population.

There is a variation of some 520 voters between the largest and smallest subdivisions. The largest, Elk Point/Heinsburg, has 2,950 electors, while Ashmont/Mallaig/St. Vincent is the smallest at 2,426.

Participants at the Elk Point meeting seemed fairly happy with the proposal, including the idea that six zones (rather than three or some other number) should be set up.

However, Stoney Lake resident and former MLA John Drobot requested that residents of his district be included in the Elk Point subdivision, as most of them send their children to the Elk Point Elementary School and F.G. Miller Jr./Sr. High School.

In exchange, another participant suggested, the subdivision's south-western boundary could be raised northward, allowing residents there — mostly Myrnam School supporters — to take part in the Myrnam subdivision.

Trustee Bob Smith and board chair Ray Danyluk reminded participants that the proposed boundaries are for electoral subdivisions and not school attendance areas.

However, they did agree to bring the proposal back to the committee for close examination.

A final, approved set of boundaries is required by Alberta Education by the end of February.

A meeting on the proposed boundaries was also held last night (Monday) in Myrnam. Trustees will bring the proposals to meetings in Ashmont and Two Hills tonight, and St. Paul residents can voice their opinions at the Regional High School on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

♥ Happy Valentine's Day ♥

NOTICE

The Board, Administration, and Staff of the Elk Point Hospital and Parkview Extended Care would like to extend our sincere THANKS to all of the citizens of Elk Point and District for your overwhelming support for the retention of 24-hour Emergency and Acute Care Services.

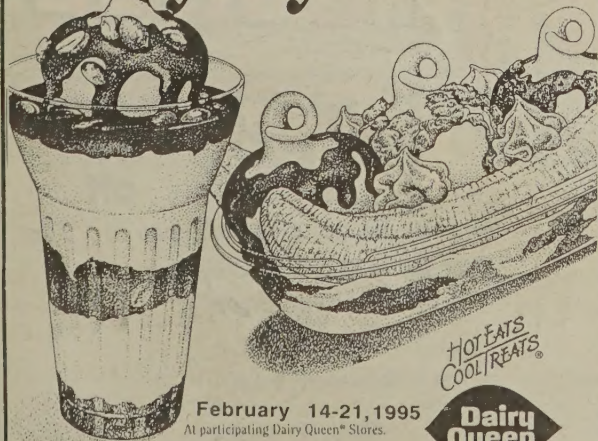

Given the extremely limited time frames we were faced with, we believe we have made a definite impact on the Regional Health Authorities. If a difference is to be made, it will only be through our own combined concern and efforts.

The Regional Health Authorities have extended their decision date on the draft proposal to February 17, 1995. Perhaps the approximately 1500 letters of concern they have received from citizens of Elk Point and area was a factor in their decision. The extension date means that you have until February 16, 1995 to write your letters of concern. Please indicate your name and address, because then they are required to provide a response to your letter.

We will keep you informed of events and decisions. Again, thank you ALL so much.

Air fresheners that give the environment a breather.

Boil cinnamon and cloves in water. Or place 40ml of baking soda in small bowls around your home. Keep rooms well ventilated.

Some common household fresheners are toxic and are potential hazardous waste. If you do use them, be aware that when the product is finished, its container should not be discarded with your regular garbage. Store it and all hazardous waste in a safe place for special waste collection or drop off your hazardous waste at a designated station.

Elementary gym back in business

It wasn't the sky that was falling, but instead the gym floor.

Teachers at Elk Point Elementary School noticed last fall that something was definitely wrong in the north east corner of their gymnasium. "We noticed the floor kept going down," says Principal Don Conrad.

Engineers visited the site in December and found rotting timbers under the east side of the floor, so bad that School Board chairman Ray Danyluk said that they were "absolutely unbelievable - a thousand words can't describe it." In places, the floor had dropped several inches from its normal level due to the shaky underpinnings.

It was determined that a 15 foot wide strip along the east side will have to be rebraced. Temporary braces have now been installed, and the gym is back in full use. The permanent repairs will be a major job, but will not disrupt the school routine.

Quest for teen talent coming

The opportunity to record a demo tape has been added to the prize list for the Youth Talent Quest, which is coming to Elk Point Elks Hall on Friday, March 3.

Vocalists, musicians, dancers and variety performers will also vie for cash prizes and the right to compete at Edmonton Klondike Days for further prizes, including a trip to Memphis, Tennessee for international competition.

Pizzas for all performers and a draw for a photo session are also on the program.

Anyone between the ages of 13 and 21 may enter the Youth Talent Quest in the categories of vocal, instrumental, dance, or variety. Entry forms may be picked up at any of the local high schools, at CHLW Radio in St. Paul, or at Home Town Grocers in Elk Point. More information may be obtained by calling 724-3776.

The audience will also be winners. In addition to hearing some top performances, many will come away with door prizes, including dinner theatre tickets, flowers and gift certificates.

Secret pals at F. G. Miller

By Kelly Oszust

F. G. Miller High School

The F. G. Miller Senior High students Union, as well as the Junior High students union, has decided to organize a Valentine's Day activity.

This activity in which the Senior High and Junior High are split up, is called Secret Pals. The procedure goes as follows: The girls draw a boy's name and vice versa. Then whomever you pick, you have to be nice to them for three or four days, giving them small gifts, etc.

We drew names on Friday and Monday. For the period that this activity goes on you

By David Daniels

Heinsburg Reporter

My name is David Daniels and I will be writing a weekly article until the end of the school year. Most of my stories will be about what's going on at Heinsburg School but a few may be about my home town of Fishing Lake. I am doing this as a Special Project in journalism for Mrs. Brenda Bintz.

Our student council has been really busy lately. They have lots of events planned. On Friday night there is a concert at our school gym put on by Frances, the proceeds of this are going to the Class of '95. We are also having a box social and school dance on the afternoon of the 15th. On Friday we are hosting a Grade 5 and 6 floor hockey tournament which also includes J. F. Dion and Frog Lake schools. At the must keep your identity a secret. Then on the final day, you can reveal who you are to the person that you picked.

News Flash!

Elk Point Crusaders girls are back from Canmore with 3rd place in this weekends tournament. Bonnie West was named an all star, and coach Ray Danyluk said, Renee Anderson, Denise Drielick and Tina Henderson had "exceptional games."

Heinsburg Senior Boys' Eagles improving end of the month, Grades 3 to 12 are going on a skiing trip to Kinosoo Ridge. We're in for a busy next few weeks.

The Heinsburg Eagles Senior Boys basketball team had a tough time on the weekend, suffering losses to Marwayne, Onion Lake and Glendon. Although it's been a long hard season for the Eagles' coach, Brian Clarke has seen a few bright spots. The team is young and plays with lots of heart and desire, they are improving as a team both offensively and defensively. He thinks the team has a great future. This is partly because of the play of Tyler Gladue and Jamie Sharkey. Opposing coaches have commended the pair on their strong play to Mr. Clarke.

That's all the news from Heinsburg this week!

What's News at the Library

Love the library? Why not get involved?

By Michele Ducek
Librarian

Did you ever think to yourself that the library is a pretty good thing and you would like to become more involved with it? Well, there are three groups that would love to have you.

The first is the Friends of the Library. This is a group of people who raise money for the library by working bingos in St. Paul. For just a dollar a year you can be a library fundraiser, too. Speaking of bingos, the one on February 4th raised $2500. Thanks to all who helped out at this bingo and all the other bingos.

The second is the library volunteers. These people help out in the library. I have several projects in mind for anyone who would like to volunteer. It does not have to be a permanent commitment, short term volunteers are welcome.

The third group is the Elk Point Public Library Board. This volunteer board of people from the community holds a monthly meeting and provides guidance for the library and the librarian. Interested people can inquire at the Town Office.

Jonathan Kellerman's latest Alex Delaware is called Self-Defense. I've been told by one who has read it that it is another good one. I'm waiting for all you other Jonathan Kellerman readers to have a chance before I read it. We have also added four donated paperbacks by Faye Kellerman, wife of Jonathan. She is a popular mystery writer in her own right. She puts a cynical L.A. police detective together with a very devout Jewish widow. Not only are the stories engaging, but the information about Jewish customs is very interesting.

Popular author LaVyrle Spencer has just produced Home Song. A condensed version of this novel appears in February's Good Housekeeping. Tom Gardner, devoted husband, father and high school principal; is stunned when a new student turns out to be his son, the product of a one night stand Tom had just before he got married. This revelation throws his family into turmoil. Spencer's last novel, Family Blessings, had me in tears after the first chapter so I'm really looking forward to reading this one.

WINTER

PARTICIPATION

Snowmobilers rally in Heinsburg

Almost three hundred snowmobilers and close to another 50 riders braved Saturday's icy winds to take part in the Heinsburg Snowmobile Rally.

After a day in the scenic outdoors, all returned safely to Heinsburg Community Hall for a huge roast beef supper and the presentation of prizes, with many staying on for the evening's dance.

The organizers did very well in the prize department, with approximately 80 door prizes given out to lucky participants, in addition to the cash prizes and trophies for the hidden number prizes.

At each of five checkpoints, participants drew numbers which were recorded on their cards. At checkpoint #5, back at the hall, these numbers were totalled up and recorded. Prizes of $50 each went to the participant with the largest total, Monty Quinlan with 496 points, and the smallest total, Marty Paulgaard with just 32 points. Volunteers were selected from the crowd to draw five numbers apiece for the hidden prize numbers which qualified the participant with the identical number for the big prizes. Lorne Young and Melvin Bardoel tied for the fifth prize of $100, with Young winning a tiebreaking draw. Jason Hager won $150 and a trophy sponsored by Woody's Trophies and Gifts, with Brent Becker qualifying for $250, Chris Thomson for $500 and the Sharkey's Bus Service trophy, and Leonard Wilson for a whopping $1000 and the Rudolph Gregor Memorial Trophy.

Nine-year-old Catlin Lorensen won a shiny new helmet as the youngest rider taking part.

WINDSOR CLUB LADIES' SPIEL - winners of the first place trophies from Valley Service, presented by Mike Breen, were (l-r) Maryann Kozicky, Shirley Rolheiser, Terry Shankowski and Diane Hawryluk.

SECOND PRIZE - and trophies from Hillebrand Farms, were presented by Nellie Hillebrand to (l-r) Pearl Anderson, Mary Nelson, Doreen Younghans and Marge Heffernan. Nine rinks took part in the two day spiel.

ELK POINT ATOM II - hosted a six team tournament this weekend, and won over Vermilion and Lac La Biche before losing to Marwayne in the final game for the championship. Other teams taking part were from Wainwright and Glendon.

Elks shoot down Cold Lake Packers

Elk Point Elks captured their third win in a row Friday night, when they doubled Cold Lake Packers 6 - 3 at the A. G. Ross Arena. Cold Lake got the first goal early in the first period, by Brad McKeage off an assist by Bill Kidd, and held their lead until just past the 16 minute mark. At that point, Kerry Loughran zipped one past the goalie off assists by Blair and Billy Halfe, with two more goals, by Rick Austin assisted by Sheldon Cardinal, and by Cardinal assisted by Austin and Cory Laboucane, as the Elks accelerated to a 3-1 lead in the space of 64 seconds.

The second period saw one goal for each team, with Bobby Houle making it 4-1 for the Elks off an assist by Brian Halfe, and Bill Kidd scoring for the Packers with the help of Jeff Bond.

The Elks kept up their onslaught in the final period, Jeff Buck marking the Elks' fifth goal with assists by Kerry Loughran and Blair Halfe within the first minute of play. Todd Gascon, assisted by Al Pele, scored for Cold Lake in mid-period, but the Elks added another, by Bobby Houle and assisted by Brian Halfe and Sheldon Cardinal, for a final score of 6 - 3 for the Elks.

Both goalies, Sean Bonneteau for the Packers and Jacques Hebert for the Elks, were outstanding and kept it from being a very high scoring game.

Elks 11 - Monarchs 9

Speaking of high scoring games, that's what happened in Kitscoty last Wednesday night when the Elks travelled to visit the Monarchs. Three Elks racked up hat tricks, with Cory Laboucane having three goals and three assists, Rick Austin three goals and two assists, and Billy Halfe three goals and one assist. Derrick Keller and Blair Halfe contributed singles, with Halfe adding three assists and Keller one.

Jason Newman scored three and assisted one for Kitscoty, while Larry Bexson added two goals and three assists. Clint McKinley, Kent McAllister, Don King and Keith Yasinko scored singles.

Kitscoty scored four goals to three for the Elks in the first period, but the visitors came back with three in a row as opposed to one by the Monarchs to snag the lead after two. The Elks added five and the Monarchs four in a very busy final period.
